Read: Tonsure by Kevin Young

Forever you find your father
in other faces—
a balding head
 or beard enough
to send you following
for blocks after
 to make sure
you're wrong, or buying some stranger a beer to share. Well, not just one—and here,
among a world that mends
 only the large things,
let the shadow grow
upon your face
 till you feel
at home. It's all
yours, this father
 you make
each day, the one
you became when yours
 got yanked away.
Take your place between the men bowed
 at the bar, the beer
warming, glowing faint
as a heart: lit
 from within & just a hint bitter.
